

Sue Paish, Q.C.
Chair, Business Council of British Columbia

Sue most recently served as President and CEO of LifeLabs, leading the organization's approximately 5,400 professionally-trained employees, who deliver over 100 million laboratory tests and results, serving 19 million patient visits annually. From 2012 to 2017, Sue led the company through one of the most significant periods of growth, transformation and success in its 50-year history

Prior to joining LifeLabs, Sue led Pharmasave Drugs (National) Ltd., the largest independently owned and operated banner of community pharmacies in Canada. This followed a successful career practicing law and managing an international law practice; Sue was the managing partner of Fasken Martineau DuMoulin LLP in BC (now Fasken Martineau), where she led the growth of the firm from one office to an international presence with nine offices on three continents.

Sue received a Queen's Counsel designation in 2001 and was inducted into the Hall of Fame for Canada's Top 100 Most Powerful Women. Sue has also been recognized as one of Canada's top 25 women lawyers as well as a "Distinguished Alumni" from her Alma Mater at UBC.

Sue is a recognized community and business leader. She currently sits on a number of corporate and community boards including the CORIX group of companies, and chairs the Royal Columbian Hospital Redevelopment Campaign. She formerly chaired the boards for the Michael Smith Foundation for Health Research, the Vancouver Board of Trade, and the MLA Compensation Task Force, among others.

Sue's family and her love of the outdoors are her prime motivators. With husband, Brad, and three daughters sometimes in tow, Sue can often be found camping, fishing or hiking the North Shore Mountain trails and many remote areas of BC.
